Since childhood, colors have been my favorite language. Long before I knew what art truly meant, I found myself filling sketchbooks, notebooks, and even empty walls with strokes of imagination. For me, painting was never just a hobby—it was a space where I felt free, expressive, and connected to the world in a way that words could never describe. I still remember the first paintings I made as a kid—simple flowers, faces, patterns—drawn with more excitement than technique. Those early days planted a seed. Every canvas I touched thereafter added clarity, depth, passion and purpose to my journey.
